Alumni to meet with students at job fair

By AMY JOHNSON
The BG News

An opportunity to meet with University alumni about career advice and guidance will take place today in 101 Olscamp Hall during the "What To Be or Not To Be" career fair.

From 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., students will be able to engage in informal discussions with professionals from career fields such as art, business, communications, education, law, science, medical, social services and technology, just to name a few.

"Students are not going to find such a distinguished group of alumni giving career information in one setting again this year," said Joann Kroll, director of career services. "This will help students make better career choices by receiving accurate information upon basing their career decisions."

Professionals such as an orthopedic surgeon, a speech and language pathologist, an owner of an audio-show production, a two-time Pulitzer Prize nominee, an arts administrator, Jim Tichy from WNWO TV-24 Sports in Toledo and various others will attend the event.

Students will be able to discuss and sit with the professionals and participate in meaningful discussion, Kroll said.

"This is a good example of catering to many majors and professions," Kroll said. "This is not just catered toward medical and business majors, but many majors."

Heidi McCormick, a graduate student working with career services, said the career fair will introduce University alumni to students.

"We are providing an opportunity for students to socialize with people who were once 'in their shoes,'" McCormick said. "These

State budget sees increase

Voinovich's plan to involve modest spending gains

■ Presidents from several Ohio universities speak out against Voinovich's budget. Story, page three.

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS - State spending - except on prisons and Ohio's urban and poor school districts - basically would creep up with inflation under the $36.14 billion budget proposed by Gov. George Voinovich on Monday.

"It's a modest cost of living adjustment for state government," state Budget Director Greg Browning said at a budget briefing.

In addition to reporters, dozens of state agency officials and special interest lobbyists attended the briefing. Many left disappointed, as Browning explained that most state agencies would receive funding increases below the 3 percent annual inflation rate.

Overall, Voinovich proposed general revenue fund spending increases of 4.4 percent in the year beginning July 1, and another 5 percent the following year. State officials said the budget represents the second-slowest two-year budget plan in more than 30 years.

In 1995, Voinovich sought annual increases of 6.8 percent and 6.1 percent in the $33.5 billion budget he proposed for 1995-97.

On Monday, he recommended spending $15.8 billion on education and child-related health and other services in the next two years. He also proposed spending about $8.6 billion on primary and secondary education during the period - with increases of 4 percent and 4.9 percent a year.

Altogether, spending on primary and secondary education will eat up 23.7 percent of the budget. The biggest chunk, 30.5 percent, will go for Medicaid.

But while Browning characterized education as the state's top spending priority, the prison budget contained much faster growth.

The Department of Rehabilitation and Correction would get $1.1 billion in the first year of the budget, an increase of 8.5 percent over the current budget year, and $1.2 billion in the fol-

Springboard prepares students for future

Undergraduates learn basic skills for work force

By MELISSA NAYMIK
The BG News

Students can take a chance to relax and escape from hectic schedules by signing up with the Springboard program at the University.

Springboard was founded by Milt Hakel, professor of psychology at the University, and co-founded by Ellie McCreery, associate director of the Institute for Psychological Research and Application.

The program teaches students the basic skills they will need to acquire for the future, especially in the work force.

Students who register for this class will learn such skills as communication, analysis, problem solving, judgment, self-assurance and leadership.

The course is not a lecture and no tests are given. Springboard was designed to give students the chance to interact with one another. Students from backgrounds and cultures have the opportunity to communicate with one another on different levels.

"Past participants of Springboard found the program to be 'cool' and 'awesome.' Everyone experiences a wonderful time," McCreery said.

Since this is not a lecture course, professors are not required to teach. Those who do teach are called "coaches." All coaches come from a variety of social backgrounds. University faculty, administrative staff, classified staff, graduate students and members of the community at large make up the community of volunteer coaches.

"This is a very different program here at the University. There is nothing else like it here on campus," Hakel said.

There are a total of seven group meetings and five one-on-one individual sessions with coaches. During three of the sessions, students are videotaped. However, this is a positive perspective of the program instead of a negative one.

Students who are interested in the opportunity to experience Springboard should contact Ellie McCreery by e-mailing her at emccree@bgnet.bgsu.edu.

Meg Knopf, production manager for Student Publications and Springboard coach, believes students who register for the course will greatly benefit from it in the future.

"Springboard is a great program because students learn basic conducting skills for the future," Knopf said.

Speech and debate team successful in competition

University Forensics squad prepares for state tournament

By JACK BUEHRER
The BG News

If speaking is a lost art, then tell that to the University Forensics team.

Over the years, the competitive speech and debate team has enjoyed considerable success competing in various speech and oral interpretation events around the nation, and more recently, the Midwest.

A one-time national powerhouse while affiliated with the IPC department, the team has competed on a more local level of late as a part of the theater department, but feels ready to take their skills to the highest level once again.

"This team is very impressive," said team co-director James Brandon. "They work very hard, and they're ready to do some pretty wonderful things at the state tournament this year. I definitely think we're getting close to moving up to the national level again."

According to Brandon, during the late '70s and the early '80s Bowling Green was one of the better forensics teams in the country, and currently ranks in the top three all time in total awards won. These days they've been competing less while spending more time practicing and honing their skills.

"We try to add a tournament every year," he said. "We were in six tournaments last semester, and we plan on participating in at least two more this semester."

"We have one big tournament in both semesters. The biggest in the fall is the OSU Holiday Frolic. We took sixth place there. We were very pleased with that finish because it was out of 36 other schools. In the spring we really gear our students for the state tournament. There also is the national tournament held in April which we may or may not send students to depending on how much money we have left."

Each tournament is sponsored by the National Forensics Association and is conducted in a very specific format. Each team sends approximately 8-10 students who participate in three categories: prepared speech, limited preparation speech and oral interpretation.

Each participant will deliver their speech three times for three different judges. Those who qualify by receiving the highest average score will advance to the final round.

The members of the team are

Job begging becomes brutally ugly

How do you prove your worth to a complete stranger?

For those of us who are up to our eyebrows in resumes, cover letters and letters of recommendation, this is the question that weighs heaviest on our minds right now.

It's a time for catch phrases like "It's not what you know, it's who you know." The sweetness of getting that degree is made bitter-sweet somehow. The time has come to find a job. A Real Job.

May graduates are getting all kinds of advice. Family, friends, professors and Career Services all have the sweet formula that will land you in the career of a lifetime. My father's advice was to "go right into their office and introduce yourself." If it were only that easy.

These days all the help wanted advertisements read "send resume, clips; NO PHONE CALLS." No one wants to talk to you. They want to see credentials; tangible evidence of your abilities before they deal with you face-to-face. It's easier to weed people out, to "break the news" to a faceless voice on the phone.

Job hunting etiquette dictates a call-back after you send in your resume to a potential employer. Lately those phone calls for me have been short, uncomfortable conversations with the person who would have been my boss about how I can improve my resume package.

I'm always doing some ever so slight ass-kissing during call-backs, just in case my would-be boss changes her or his mind. Or perhaps a position will come up in the company in the near future and they'll remember how polite and interested I sounded on the phone. Outwardly, I'm posing as the model employee. But inside I'm thinking "Geez, this is a cold, Darwinian way to go about things." And to add salt to my wound, just before hanging up, the manager or personnel director or whoever they are tells me that there were 48 applicants just like me (on paper) after the exact same job.

Suddenly, I get this image in my mind. I see myself in a large room with many tables and on those tables, placed ever so neatly, weapons of every kind. Standing all around me are the 48 other people after the same job, poised, their eyes fixed on their weapon of choice. A gong sounds and the blood bath begins, a cacophony of steel and gore. And when it is all over, there I am, mace in one hand, Samurai sword in the other, the last one standing, panting and sweating there in my snazzy interview duds looming over the bodies of my foes, pieces of their resumes still falling like autumn leaves to the bloody floor.

I'm suddenly jerked awake by the department manager or personnel director or whoever they are. She says, "Thanks for calling back and good luck."

I say, "Thanks for taking time out to talk with me." Ba-bye.

That's before they even want my references (for they must request them). And there's a slim to none chance I'll ever get to the interview stage. It's just February, and I'm beginning to wonder if I'll ever get to the point where I'll actually get an interview. I can't say I'm looking forward to them, in fact to a certain degree, I'm dreading that next step.

I think part of my apprehension may be based on past experience with my interviews for summer internships.

I had an interview with the editor of a Columbus newsworthy and I really wanted the internship. I got all dressed up and took my briefcase with my clips and resume and headed to their offices downtown. I eventually got lost and had to call their offices for directions. The secretary put me on hold to ask the editor for directions. Strike One. Once I did find the offices, I gathered together all my stuff, locked my car and headed for the entrance. It was about then that I realized I'd locked my keys in my car. Strike Two. My mind was reeling. How could I make a complete boob of myself (after getting lost) and ask to use the phone to call AAA because, surprise, me the idiot locked my keys in my car?

I decided to discuss that with myself after the interview. Luckily, the interview went famously. I left with a good feeling, but that was soon erased.

Now what? Should I be honest and ask the secretary to use the phone because I locked up my keys? Heck no! The interview went way too well, I didn't want to ruin the mood by proving without a doubt that I was totally mindless. I wanted that internship. I shook hands, thanked everyone and sneaked across the hall to the next office, some environmental advocacy organization. They were nice enough, they even exchanged some of their own horror stories about locking their keys in their cars. There I was able to call AAA. I went out to sit on the curb by my car and wait. After 20 minutes or so, the secretary came out of the building. I was mortified-what if she saw me, sitting there by my car? I had to think fast. So I hid behind my car.

She didn't see me. AAA got me my keys. I got the internship.

Needless to say, most of what happened happened because I was nervous. So I'm not looking forward to the interviews. Oh but they're coming.

Like the rest of those graduating in May, all I can do is grab my weapon of choice and come out swinging.

At BGSU, it's not easy to find beer

For students residing on Bowling Green State University's beautiful, student-happiness oriented campus, it is possible to live sufficiently without ever having to leave the campus grounds. That's right, our campus is entirely self contained. Due to meal plans, "BIG Charge," and our new-found right to sign our lives away to the bursar, it is completely unnecessary for a Bowling Green student to even carry money. Everything from books to toothpaste is BG Bursarable. Students can purchase party snacks at any one of our campus convenience stores, toiletries, posters, and sweatshirts at the BG Bookstore, or, of course, delicious, (nothing like) home cooked meals in our many (over-priced) first class cafeterias and dining halls. We Falcon students can even BIG Charge condoms out of on-campus vending machines.

With all of these amenities, one would think that the several thousand on-campus residents of BGSU would be as happy as clams. However, one learns differently within one's first few months on campus.

To the dismay of many, there is one thing that a student cannot purchase via meal card. None of our convenience marts have a very good selection of beer. In fact, none of these marts have a selection of beer at all! No light beers, no imports, no lagers—Nothing!

One would think that beer drinking is frowned upon by the administration of our university, or something. Since the assumed goal of having the many cafeterias, convenience stores, and the all-containing book store strategically located within a drunken crawl's distance of most places on campus would be to make things a little easier on the students—perhaps to offer some form of severance for the thousands of dollars that they forcibly strip from each of us every year—it would seem that the only addition to our campus that would truly make things a little easier on the students would be that of an all-night beer store which would accept our meal plan as a form of payment. Such an addition as a campus beer-mart, if properly advertised to college-bound high school seniors, would surely raise the number of incoming freshmen every year, thereby raising the amount of money that our administration would be capable of pilfering, thereby raising the budget for other such campus improvements (i.e. useless but expensive pedestrian malls, President Ribeau's salary, etc).

Upon mentally examining the likelihood of things as convenient for students as an all-night beer store coming soon to a campus near me, I also began to reflect upon the number of things around here that really are convenient for college students. I came up with "not many." I also recalled a time when I accompanied a friend of mine named Kim to our local Kroger grocery, where she, being of discerning taste, intended to buy a twelve-pack of Busch Light Beer. I, also being of discerning taste, was in the store to purchase a tube of toothpaste. Kim was in front of me in line and the total of her purchase came to ten dollars and twelve cents. In order for her to avoid breaking a twenty dollar bill and be forced to carry around a ten, a five, four ones, and eighty-eight cents, I offered to her the use of the twelve cents that had been burning a hole in my own pocket all day. Excitedly, Kim thrust the new found wealth in the direction of the grocery checker, who refused to take the twelve cents from Kim until I furnished a valid ID.

"I cannot accept any contribution toward the sale of alcohol without viewing a valid, state issued ID from all contributing parties," said the checker.

The individual was prepared to call the Drug Enforcement Agency to come and cart us away over twelve cents. Twelve cents!! What—in Heaven's name—could she have been thinking? Maybe that any supervisor at Kroger would have been willing to fire her over twelve cents offered from one customer to another for the sake of good will? For the love of GOD, I am certain that her job would have been spared! The only conclusion that my feeble mind can ascertain is that there is a conspiracy—headed by the administration of BGSU, of course—to make life just a little harder on the decent, God fearing, college-aged beer drinkers of the country. And the only thing that will put my mind to rest would be the installation of an all-night beer store on campus which would be included in our student meal plans.

Disney offers valuable intern, career choices

By AMY JOHNSON
The BG News

Gaining valuable career experience and living in Florida can be achieved by becoming an intern at Walt Disney World Company.

Interested students can learn about this opportunity by attending an information session on The Walt Disney World College Program on Feb. 6 at 7 p.m. in 115 Olscamp Hall.

According to Melissa Wilson, a senior sports management major and campus representative for the Walt Disney program, the program is an excellent opportunity for any major.

"Almost any major can go down and work for Disney," Wilson said. "For example, Disney is environmentally sound so any student interested in environmental studies may want to apply."

Mike Meibuhr, a junior tourism major, just returned from working at The Emporium, a busy, high-grossing store at Disney, for the past five months.

"I liked working there because it is very unique," Meibuhr said. "You can do any job at Disney and can change jobs every six months. There are always more opportunities."

Wilson said the program is continually growing.

"From the University, we currently have nine students working there and two of them are on the accelerated intern program," she said.

According to Wilson, working for Disney was an "amazing experience."

"When you are working there you don't even feel like you are working," Wilson said. "Anything you want to do, they'll help you with it."

Wilson worked for eight months at Disney as a lifeguard and helped assist with training and staffing by learning sport and recreation management style.

"This is a great opportunity because Disney is such a successful company," she said. "They have opened up a broad, new sport division such as a

Budget may harm education quality

Presidents of area universities to ask Legislature for spending increase

"We've been very genteel. Well, those days are over."

Joseph Steger
Cincinnati President

The Associated Press

Gov. George Voinovich's proposed state spending plan for the next two years could cost Ohio's college students more and hurt the quality of higher education, university presidents said Monday.

The presidents said they will ask the Legislature to boost the spending increases of 3.4 percent and 3.7 percent that Voinovich proposed for colleges and other education in the two-year state budget that begins July 1.

The allotments won't keep up with inflation, they said. They contend money allotted to higher education has languished below the inflation rate for at least the past six years, said Joseph Steger, the University of Cincinnati's president.

The universities will ask students and alumni to help lobby lawmakers for help, said Steger, who is also president of a panel representing the state's university presidents.

lowing year, an increase of 9.7 percent.

"This is reality budgeting," Browning said, putting the blame on the state's growing prison population and new anti-crime policies pushed by a get-tough Legislature.

"This is not Gov. George Voinovich with a proactive agenda to spend more money on prisons than we spend on education."

Feeling particularly left out were advocates for Ohio's public colleges and universities, who were told to count on increases of 3.4 percent and 3.8 percent.

The funding levels are simply too low for Ohio's public universities to do a thorough job of preparing students for careers, said Elaine Hairston, chancellor of the Ohio Board of Regents.

"Today's proposed budget is lodged in the past, not built for the future," Ms. Hairston said.

Browning offered a ray of hope. When the state recalculates its revenue projections in May, he promised Voinovich would consider letting colleges and universities split any extra money with elementary and secondary schools.

Key elements of proposed Ohio budget

Key elements of Gov. George Voinovich's proposed $36.14 billion state operating budget for the two years beginning July 1:

COLLEGES and UNIVERSITIES

■ Caps tuition increases at 3 percent a year. Boards of trustees could raise tuition an additional 1 percent with a second vote, but the money must be used for financial aid for Ohio undergraduates.

■ Continues funding for Central State University.

EDUCATION

■ Expands Head Start funding by 8.5 percent the first year and 16.5 percent the second to provide day care to an additional 4,600 children, or 100 percent of those eligible.

■ Provides $87 million for all-day kindergarten in the eight largest school districts.

■ Sets aside $15 million for grants to help urban school districts deal with discipline problems.

■ Provides an additional $5.8 million to extend the voucher program in Cleveland that allows low-income parents to send their children to private schools.

■ Creates a pilot charter school program in the Toledo area.

■ Increases basic state aid from $3,500 per pupil to $3,660 the first year and $3,767 the second. Increases by $213 million the extra subsidy for the poorest 292 school districts.

■ Provides $300 million for school building repairs and construction in the poorest 62 school districts and the eight largest. Creates the Ohio School Facilities Commission.

WELFARE

■ Increases Medicaid funding to provide medical benefits for about 97,000 children from families with income below 150 percent of the poverty level.

■ Carries over the $111.3 million human services contingency fund.

■ Increases the number of slots available for the PASSPORT program, which allows the elderly to receive nursing care in their homes.

■ Increases subsidized child care spending by $28 million the first year, and $10 million the second year.

TAXES

■ Includes $204.5 million in personal income tax reduction and $94.2 in investment tax credits to manufacturers previously approved by Legislature.

■ Makes permanent an income tax reduction fund that returns revenue above a 5 percent rainy fund. Taxpayers are due $400.8 million on their 1996 returns, and the state estimates another $285.7 million tax cut in 1997.

■ Restructures the corporate franchise tax, which will lower tax collection by $26 million in the 1999 budget year.

■ Changes the tax formula for insurance companies and banks. The insurance changes will cost the state $12 million in 1999; banks will save $15.2 million.

■ Exempts personal computers purchased by certified elementary and secondary teachers from the 5 percent state sales tax.

PRISONS

■ Creates 2,025 new job openings at the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction.

■ Provides money for five new prisons, which will increase the system's capacity by 3,200 beds and help reduce overcrowding.

■ Gives state the authority to sign a contract with a private company to run a medium security prison in Ashtabula County.

■ Expands six existing community-based corrections facilities and opens four new ones.

required to take one credit hour of either Theater 110 or 310 and are required to attend one tournament each semester. Every first year member is called a novice. After being a member of the team for one year, they are a member of the varsity.

"We hold auditions each spring for anyone who is interested," faculty adviser Ronald Shields said. "The University gives us $15,000 a year in scholarships. We want people who are talented in public speaking and willing to do what is required to be a part of this team. Those are the people we're looking for."

"We don't close the door to anyone. We get a lot of education majors, IPC majors, and pre-law students. But we're open to all majors. Anyone who is qualified can participate."

Junior IPC major and student coach Scott Irelan thinks being a part of the team is an important tool for his future, and others like him.

"I've already gotten offers to be an assistant coach of the forensics teams at Miami University, University of Akron and Central Michigan," he said. "That really interests me. I would like to teach at either the college or high school level and continue to coach forensics."

Fellow student coach Anne

Zoekler agreed with Irelan.

"This is a very positive experience for people," she said. "It's definitely a good advancement for my career choice, which is law. It gives me confidence to speak in front of people, which I'll definitely have to do as a lawyer. It helps people of all careers, though."

Both Irelan and Zoekler, in addition to being student coaches, also participate as varsity team members.

"We are becoming a much stronger team," Irelan said. "Last year we came in sixth in the state and we're in a position to better that this year."

Zoekler is also optimistic about the future of the current team.

"I feel like we're gaining strength as a team," she said. "We're all pretty close and everyone is very talented. We're all confident that we can do very well."

According to Brandon, members of the forensics team will take their experiences with them in every walk of life.

"Speaking skills are important in any career," he said. "After their years with this team are over, they will have spoken enough that they should never be afraid to speak in public. Their time management skills will be vastly improved, and they will have had an experience that will last them their whole life."

Tracksters ready for championships

Men finish second to Chippewas

By TOD McCLOSKEY
The BG News

Winning isn't everything, especially in track and field where you can't judge a score by its cover. Three teams — Akron, Ohio, and Central Michigan — competed against Bowling Green at the Field House last Saturday. Central came out on top, yet the Falcons feel positive about their performance. "It wasn't the fact that we had a horrible meet, and that's why they beat us. We had a very good meet, they just had an outstanding meet," coach Sid Sink said.

Bowling Green did manage to beat Ohio and Akron without much problem, but Central Michigan proved to have too much depth for BG to handle. Teams that have more depth tend to do better in dual meets. Just before the 800 meter was run, BG was in the hunt for first.

"The 800 was a tough one. I thought we had a chance to go one, two and they ended up going one, two in a close, very competitive race," Sink said.

Patrick Miller of Bowling Green grabbed third, while Central Michigan took first, second, and fourth, a difference of seven points. The top three places were decided by just over a tenth of a second.

In other distance events, Craig Nieset, who is setting fire to the track, won the mile with a smoking time of 4 minutes, 15.95 seconds. Nieset held off three Central Michigan runners for the win, but evidence of the Bronco's depth was apparent.

mile, Central won the event in points, taking the second, third and fourth spots.

"Craig Nieset was running a fast [second half] in the mile and beat some very good people," Sink said.

Bowling Green was challenged in the 3,000 and 5,000 meter, where only one point was scored, despite competitive races.

"Their [Central's] distance runners just ran tremendous,"

Sink said.

Despite being the bridesmaid, the atmosphere of the Field House was energetic. The Falcons were cheered on by five hundred plus people in attendance.

"I thought it was a very exciting meet," Sink said. "For the crowd, it was really exciting."

Adam Rose continued his brilliance in the shot put. This time he threw for the Bowling Green indoor shot put record, 56 feet, 7.5 inches. Rose already holds the outdoor record, and can now add the indoor as well. Following behind Rose, Alex Moser took fourth — giving BG a big day in the shot put.

In the 35lb. weight throw, Alex Moser and Rob Koury teamed up for third and fourth. With the hammer and shot put events, the big men kept BG in the contest right from the start.

BG also did well in the high jump, sending the event into a jump-off, track and field's version of overtime, to win it. In the extra frame, Doug Heitkamp bested two Akron foes with a height of 6 feet, 7.5 inches.

"Doug Heitkamp winning the jump-off was kind of exciting," Sink said.

Women take top honors

By BRETT THOMPSON
The BG News

Gutsy performances and broken records highlighted a dominating victory by the Bowling Green women's track team Saturday afternoon.

The Falcons thrilled a huge University Field House crowd by cruising to a big win over MAC rivals Akron, Central Michigan, and Ohio. BG racked up 62.5 points to easily out-distance Central Michigan, who managed 36.5. OU took third place, and Akron struggled to a last-place finish with 19.5 points.

Bowling Green started strong in the throwing events and never looked back. Nikki Sturzingler led the way with an indoor personal record of 46 feet, 5.25 inches, placing first in the shot put. Heather Nordgren also threw well, taking a first in the #20 weight throw with a 51 foot, 1 inch toss.

The sprinters then picked up where the throwers left off, as Kaleitha Johnson shook off a season-long injury to set a new Field House record in the 55-meter hurdles. Johnson set the mark with a winning time of 8.12 seconds.

"Kaleitha took last week off and didn't hurdle, so I think the rest did her a lot of good," said BG coach Steve Price. "She's not up-to-par yet in the 55-meter and 200-meter. I don't know if it's her injury or a matter of fitness, but hopefully those times will get better in the next couple of weeks. Her performance in the 55 hurdles showed a lot of improvement, though."

Netters come close to upset

By RYAN JOHNSON
The BG News

The Bowling Green men's tennis team was unable to win key points as they suffered a narrow loss Saturday night to the Ohio State Buckeyes. The Falcons lost 4-3 to a very strong Buckeye squad at the Racquet Club of Columbus.

Bowling Green (1-1) battled one of the top Big Ten teams, and missed being victorious by losing just a couple of key rallies. The Falcons lost two out of three doubles contests before splitting the six singles flights.

"We competed very well against a tough Ohio State team," coach Jay Harris said. "We proved to ourselves that we can compete on their level."

Harris hopes that his team views the loss as a step towards improving, rather than a discouragement.

"We have to compete well enough to give ourselves a chance to win and we definitely did that," the first-year coach said. "That's all that I can hope for right now."

At the No. 1 singles flight, Falcon co-captain Adam Tropp defeated Ben Basil 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 to improve to 2-0 on the early spring season. Sophomore Matt Wiles, playing at the No. 4 position for the first time, bettered his Buckeye opponent 6-4, 2-6, 6-2. Harris believed before the match that Wiles could perform up to the challenge.

"In that No. 4 position, we usually try to put in the hot player," Harris said. "Matt Wiles played really well and kind of made me look like a genius."

Also victorious in singles play was junior Dave Anderton who played impressively by breezing past his opponent 6-0, 6-2. Sophomore Radu Bartan and senior Joel Terman both lost close two-set matches, with Bartan losing to Wiles' brother, Scott, 6-4, 6-3. Terman lost to Ohio State's Marc Wurtzman 6-3, 7-6.

"We have to compete well enough to give ourselves a chance to win, and we definitely did that."

men's tennis coach

Co-captain Ryan Gabel lost a tough three-set match at No. 6 singles 2-6, 7-5, 6-3. Gabel had two match points in the second set but was unable to finish off his Buckeye opponent. After the match, Gabel echoed the optimism of his coach that the Falcons can learn from the tough loss.

"Instead of it being a setback, we can use it as a positive experience," Gabel said. "Now we know that we're just as good as they are. Hopefully we can just learn from our mistakes and take that into our next match."

In doubles action, the Bartan-Anderton tandem came back from an early deficit to win 9-7. The Tropp-Gabel tandem, along with the pair of Wiles-Sonny Huynh, were both defeated by Ohio State 8-4 and 8-2, respectively.

"Our doubles teams came out really timid," Harris said. "We tended to be reactive instead of proactive. We need to start forcing the issue."

The Falcons will look to get back on track this weekend as the team pulls double duty. BG will play at Michigan State Saturday before returning home to take on Northern-Illinois on Sunday. Action for both matches is scheduled for 10 a.m.

Congress prepares for address

Clinton delivers fourth speech to House, Senate

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- Strange things happen when President Clinton goes to Congress: The wrong speech winds up in the TelePrompTer. The president drones on for 81 minutes, testing listeners' patience. He issues a hollow veto threat.

And, to hear the analysts tell it, he's only had one good line in his previous State of the Union addresses.

On Tuesday night, Clinton rides up to Capitol Hill in a black limousine to deliver his fourth State of the Union address before a joint session of the House and Senate.

In the warm glow of post-election harmony, it's likely to be a night full of declarations of bipartisanship and co-operation -- followed by months of political gamesmanship and hard negotiations.

The president works for weeks on State of the Union addresses, refining ideas and phrases, but the rhetorical flourishes are soon forgotten.

"Judging by the previous ones, it's just not going to be memorable or terribly important," said University of Virginia political scientist Larry Sabato.

"In his entire four years in office," Sabato said, "he has only uttered one phrase that will be historically memorable: 'The era of big government is over.'" That was in 1996 as Clinton opened the campaign year. "It was a critical moment for him in his political rebirth," Sabato said. "He's had one home run."

"It's the nature of the flood of political communications," said Brookings Institution analyst Tom Mann. "These are one of many speeches given over the course of the year. No one can be memorable that many times."

Mann said Clinton had a mixed record with these addresses. "Set speeches are not the president's strength. He's much better responding more spontaneously and extemporaneously."

But after four years, there is a record of victories and defeats.

On the loser list was the colossal collapse of Clinton's sweeping plan to guarantee health insurance for every American.

Brain study links smells, emotions

The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- Using sophisticated equipment and a bag of stuff that really, really stinks, scientists have caught the brain in the act of saying, "Pee-yew!"

When women smelled the aggressively bad odor, a pair of almond-shaped structures deep in their brains kicked into overdrive. More pleasant smells didn't get that response.

Each of these structures is called an amygdala; the brain has two, one on each side. They're a key part of the brain's machinery for creating emotional reactions. In the case of a bad smell, their job appears to be to tell the rest of the brain, "Hey, you really hate this stuff."

The study is the latest to illustrate the tight connection between smells and emotions.

Scientists have long known that the link even shows up anatomically: There's a direct connection between the amygdala and the brain machinery that processes information from the nose.

The eyes and ears don't have a hot line like that, researcher David H. Zald noted. No wonder smells are so instantly repugnant or alluring, he said.

Zald, a research fellow at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Minneapolis and at the University of Minnesota, reported the new brain-scanning work Monday in Orlando, Fla., at a meeting of the American Neuropsychiatric Association.

For the study, 12 women got repeated brain scans while researchers released different smells from plastic bags. Moderately bad smells included garlic breath, natural gas and motor oil.

"YUUUUCK!"

Researchers discovered that reaction to really bad smell occurred in a pair of almond-shaped complexes deep inside the brain called amygdala.

Source: Veterans Affairs Medical Center

Pleasant smells included fruits, flowers and spices.

The reaction to the worst stench -- sulfur-bearing stuff that smelled "somewhere between rotting vegetables, rotting eggs and a sewer," as Zald put it -- showed up in both amygdalae. Pleasant odors evoked only a weak response, and just in the right amygdala.

The researchers studied women because they tend to find smells more intense and more unpleasant or pleasant than men do, Zald said.

Susan Schiffman, a professor of medical psychology at Duke University Medical School who studies people's reaction to odors, called the research fascinating and said it shows a biological difference in how people respond to bad smells vs. pleasant ones.

people are better equipped to answer students' questions since they too attended this institution."

With 8,100 undecided students on campus, Kroll said this is a great opportunity to gain information about various career fields.

For students who are undecided or have an idea of what they want their chosen field to be, this career fair will enable students to talk to someone in the field, she said.

"Students can get the best advice on how to prepare themselves to enter the field such as what courses to take and guidance regarding work experience and internships," Kroll said.

McCormick said that many of the professionals have taken different career paths than what their degree reads.

"One of our visitors obtained a degree in art but is now an attorney," she said. "Many career paths do take different directions. It's important for students to do well in college regardless of their major."

As for juniors and graduating seniors, the career fair will help them network and meet professionals in their field.

Students attending the fair can sign up to win free dinners and $100 from the University bookstore.

"It's going to be fun," Kroll said. "This is an eye for the future."

The program is open to students who have completed one semester of college through non-graduating seniors.

Students interested in more information about the Disney program can stop at an informational table from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday in the Union foyer.

for the Falcons with second place finishes in the 55-meter and 200-meter. Gregory sprinted to a 7.29 mark in the 55-meter and then flew to a 25.43 in the 200. She was edged in both events by OU's Dee Dee Mitchell, one of the MAC's top sprinters.

According to Price, this meet was crucial for the Falcons.

"This was a great meet for us. It was a big win over three conference opponents. I think it was important for us to perform well, and we stepped up to the occasion. We had eighteen different girls set personal records and that says a lot," Price said. "It also helped that we had close to a thousand spectators at the meet." And it was Jessica LaFene who captured the hearts of those BG fans, winning both the mile and the 3000-meter run in dramatic fashion.

LaFene won a hard-fought battle in the mile to take first place with an indoor personal record time of 5 minutes, 10.97 seconds.

LaFene edged Nicole Eberle of Central Michigan and teammate Nikki Monroe to preserve the victory. Monroe took third with a personal record of her own with a time of 5 minutes, 16.19 seconds. It looked as if the mile had taken a toll on LaFene when she began the 3000. She struggled early and by the halfway point fell far behind the leader, OU's Kristin Diehm. LaFene got her second wind for the last 1000 meters, slowly making up ground to set up an exciting finish.

With two laps to go and 40 meters down, LaFene made her move. She swiftly closed the gap and took the lead for good with 100 meters left in the race. LaFene then coasted to the line to win by over five seconds.

The 4 X 400 relay team topped off the Falcon victory with a convincing win in the final event of the day.

Team co-captain Nikki Litz credited BG's dominating performance to a strong week of practice.

"Each week there's more and more intensity in practice," Litz said. "If we continue to work as hard as we have been for the past few weeks, we'll be tough to beat," Litz said.

Litz and Julie Niekamp soared to personal bests in the triple jump, placing second and third, respectively. Litz was pleased with her performance, and expects even more from herself and the team.

"I wasn't happy with my performance in the long jump, but I did well in the triple jump. I feel like my form is getting better, and hopefully next week I'll be jumping 36's or 37's," Litz said. "The best part about this meet was our team spirit. We have a lot of team spirit this year and any time a team has that, it's going to do better. It pushes you harder to have people cheering for you, and you end up with better performances."

The Falcons travel back to Kent State University this weekend for the All-Ohio Championships as they continue preparation for the MAC Championships in two weeks. Freshman sprinter Kristilynn Burnett, who set personal records in both the 55 and 200 Saturday, likes the team's chances for the rest of the season.

"You're going to see something from our team this season," Burnett said. "We've improved every week, and we're going to be tough when the MAC Championships roll around."

Sports Briefs

BG moves into first

ATHENS, Ohio - Geno Ford hit a 3-point shot with 18.5 seconds to play Monday night, giving Ohio a 71-70 victory over Eastern Michigan and dropping the Eagles to second place in the Mid-American Conference.

With the loss, Bowling Green moves into sole possession of first place in the MAC Conference.

It was the sprinters, however, who provided the bulk of the points, thanks to the quick feet of Darren Braddix, Terry Rivers, and Rah'Sheen Clay.

Leaping hurdles in a single bound were the consistent Braddix and the versatile Alex Sprague. Braddix sprinted to a second place, while Sprague got on the board in the fourth place slot. Rivers, who had been missing action for awhile, dashed to a second place in the grueling 400 meter run. With Rivers running well in the 400 meter, the 1600 meter relay became just that more powerful.

Clay, who was last week's MAC male Track Athlete of the Week, again amazed the crowd in the 200 meter. Breaking his own record in the indoor 200 meter (21.61), Clay missed provisional NCAA qualifying by a hundredth of a second. He also racked up another first place, the 55-meter sprint, leaving Michigan to wonder what had just happened.

Possibly, the most exhilarating race was in the 1600-meter relay. The team of Braddix, Miller, Rivers, and Clay put on a show for the spectators on hand. After the first three runners, Central Michigan had a good 10-meter lead on BG. Then as Clay grabbed the baton, Central's lead was about to go up in smoke.

As Clay and Central Michigan's runner were coming down the stretch, BG pulled away as the crowd cheered all the way. Bowling Green ended up breaking the Field House indoor 1600 meter relay by four seconds with a time of 3 minutes, 16.7 seconds.

"We finished up the meet on a high note with that mile relay. It was a big plus for us; I think it made us feel better even though we got beat in the meet by Central," Sink said.

Chicago's Hubbard Street Dance Chicago will perform on Sunday, Feb. 9 in Kobacker Hall, Moore Musical Arts Center.

Musical Arts

Premier dance company entertains BG February 9

Chicago's premier dance company, Hubbard Street Dance Chicago, will dazzle the Bowling Green community 8 p.m. Sunday February 9 in Kobacker Hall, Moore Musical Arts Center.

The company, founded in 1977 by Lou Conte, a Broadway dancer and choreographer, combines classical ballet technique, theatrical jazz and contemporary artistic style. The ensemble performs annually for a world-wide audience of more than 100,000 people each year.

HSDC has appeared on numerous American and Canadian television programs. After their first TV appearance in 1981, Fred Astaire called the performance "some of the greatest dancing I've seen in years." In 1988, the national PBS special, "A Grand Night - The Performing Arts Salute to Public Television," featured HSDC as one of the best in American performing arts. That same year the group appeared on NBC's "Today Show." HSDC also won the Governor's Award in 1986 from Illinois, prestigious acknowledgment of the company's prominence and exemplary achievement.

Acknowledgments such as these can be linked not only to the hard work and determination but also the world-class choreographers such as Twyla Tharp, Daniel Ezralo and Kevin O'Day.

The 1996-1997 performance schedule includes trips to Germany and Austria; a winter/spring tour of Minnesota, Ohio, Texas, Virginia and Wisconsin, and engagements throughout the Chicago area. Performance tickets for the local show are $24 and $15.

In 1977, HSDC was designed to fill a community need. Today, it stands as one of the most renowned dance companies in America. New York Newsday says of the performance, "Utterly superb... nothing short of spectacular."

Theater

"Isn't It Romantic" more than just a story of romance

BGSU Theatre Department introduces "Isn't It Romantic," February 12-16, in the Elsewhere Space (411 South Hall).

"Isn't It Romantic," by Wendy Wasserstein, is a mixture of comedy and drama dealing with relationships.

"It is about two women, best friends and post-college, in the midst of trying to find a career, a love life, trying to get out from underneath their parents wings and to find a place in the world," director Kristen Koeshler says.

Show times are 8 p.m. February 12-15, and 2 p.m. Feb. 16. Tickets are available at the theatre box office on the second floor of University Hall.

College

Walt Disney World College Program recruiting on campus

College recruiters from Walt Disney World will be on campus 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 6 presenting information on the Walt Disney World College Program in 115 Olscamp Hall. This information session is mandatory for any students wishing to interview for the college program.

The Walt Disney World College Program is a three-part program, living, learning and working, designed to increase students' knowledge of the entertainment and leisure studies. Through the living experience, students will be placed with other college program participants and international students from the Walt Disney World International Programs.

The learning experience gives students the opportunity to attend 10 business seminars directed by professionals from Disney University. Students will be placed in positions at any theme parks, water parks or other Walt Disney World Resort areas for their working experience.

More than 1,000 students representing over 300 U.S. universities participate each semester. The summer and fall semesters of 1997 are also a special time to be working for the "mouse" because Walt Disney World is celebrating its 25th Anniversary all year-long. Special events have been planned throughout the year and those selected to participate in the college program may be able to partake in some of the fun.

Students wanting to learn more about the program can stop by the information table in the foyer of the Student Union or gain additional information from the co-op office at 372-2451 or the campus representative, Melissa Wilson, 353-6182.

Editor's Note

Welcome to the second edition of the Campus Buzz for spring 1997. We hope this publication helps you to plan ahead for the next two weeks of the semester.

If you have a organizational meeting, or an up-coming event that you would like published in the calendar of events, then we ask that you submit it to Amy Hoag at 330 Student Activities Office at the Student Union or through the University's internet events calendar at <http://events.bgsu.edu>. These should be entered on the web events calendar by 5 p.m. Thursday prior to publication. If you have a unique event that you would like covered by the Campus Buzz, then drop us a line at laurapo@bgnet.bgsu.edu. We always welcome new suggestions!

Men's Hoops Free, Fun, and Exciting

With a win over Ohio University last Wednesday, the men's basketball team is off to it's best start in 17 years. The BG hoopsters are 15-5 overall and are alone in second place in the Mid-American Conference at 8-2.

The Falcons begin the second half of conference play this Saturday vs. the Akron Zips at 1:30. The following Saturday offers fans the chance to see a double header. The women's team plays at 1:30 vs. Eastern Michigan and the men take on the Eagles at 3:30. The men's match-up is shaping up as #1 vs.
#2. Eastern Michigan leads the conference with a 15-3 overall record and a 6-1 record in MAC play.
